

Shout it Out!

Shout it out is a fun card game for three or more players. Larger numbers of players can play as pairs or teams. One person is nominated to be the question master.

To start

The question master takes a category sheet, shuffles the 52 letter cards and deals 9 to each team. The letter cards are placed face up in front of the players.

To play

The question master reads the first category. Players look at their cards and try to think of a word from the category that begins with one of their letters. To answer, they hold the letter in the air and shout out the word.

Example: the question master gives the category, fruit. Player one holds letter 'b' in the air and shouts 'banana'.

The fastest player to shout out a correct answer wins the round. The other players must give her one of their letters. These letters are added to the winning letter and the set is put aside as a 'trick'.

The next round begins with a new category and play continues until the players have used all their letters. The winner is the player with the most tricks.

In the event of a tie, deal one extra letter card to each tied player for a decider round.

Optional rules and tips

Games are quite short. If you plan to play several games, use a pencil and paper to keep a running record of the scores.

When the letter cards are first dealt, each player has the option to choose their least useful card and trade it for a randomly dealt replacement.

If you are playing several games, nominate a new question master each time.

To add tension, the cards must be laid face up on the table – not held in the players' hands.

Experiment with any new rules you can think of, for example varying the number of cards dealt at the start.

Have fun!
